TWO BIG STEAMSHIPS SING AFTER COLLISION AT SEA

2,000 Lives in Peril off Nantucket Light After Florida Rams Republic; Baltic, After Rescuing Passengers and Crews of Both Vessels, Calls for Help

RIISING WIND AND HIGH SEAS CAUSE OF APPREHENSION

Baltic, With Passengers and Crews of Both Vessels on Board, Calls for Help by Wireless

The White Star liner Republic, bound from New York to Genoa, was rammed in a dense fog at 4 o'clock yesterday morning by the Italian liner steamship Florida, twenty-six miles south of Nantucket Lightship.

The wireless messages sent broadcast from the Republic brought to the scene the steamship Baltic of the White Star Line. No lives were lost.

The latest wireless messages received indicate that the Republic had sunk and that the Florida may not be kept afloat. All the Republic's passengers and crew were transferred to the Florida and later transhipped from the Italian liner to the Baltic.

After midnight this (Sunday) morning the Baltic sent forth a wireless message for aid. This call for help was intended for the American liner New York, due from Europe at the Nantucket Lightship at about 2 a. m. to-day.

Ho Plight of the Republic, Sinking Off Nantucket, Was Flashed Through Miles of Fog and Brought Speedy Rescue

Ramming a steamer that loomed suddenly out of the fog, 26 miles off Nantucket Light, and as suddenly disappeared, the White Star liner Republic sent appeals for aid by her wireless telegraph apparatus. Giving its first important test in naval disasters, this epoch-making invention of Marconi doubtless averted a sea horror in which many lives might have been lost. The electric sparks, shooting through miles of fog over vast expanses of shoals and wave-tossed waters, told passing ships and land stations of the great steamer's mishap, and rescuers were soon speeding to the relief of the imperiled passengers, guided on their course by the messages of the Republic's operator. The wireless instrument installed on all the great ocean liners, a duplicate of which was on the Republic, is shown in the left and corner.

'GRIN' WAR KNOCKING AT YOUR DOOR,' DECLARES ROBSON.

Whitman Congressman Says the Greatest Conflict in History Menaces Us.

"Oh, yes, I know," said Congressman Robert H. Whitman, of New York, "that a good many people say, 'But I repeat that unless the American people wake up, get control of the Pacific and never again lose it we will be plunged into the greatest war in history. It will be with Japan. I am proud of all you will hear I am proud of a man of peace. It is to insure peace that I preach the perilous war.'"

"War, terrible, grim war, is knocking at our doors. If it shall finally break through the feeble barriers now interposing, we will have none to blame but ourselves. Japan would be more than human not to have the ideas that seem to actuate her. She has just emerged victorious from two great wars, the one with mighty Russia, her ally, and the one with China. It has led this imaginative people with great audacity. Their country is crowded, they need territory. What is more natural for them than to look at the rich lands of the Philippine archipelago, the great plantations of Hawaii—any one can see golden California!"

GREAT EARTHQUAKE Baffles Experts

Seismic Disturbance Felt All Over Globe, but Cannot Be Located.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Scientists attached to the weather bureau are tonight wondering what part of the earth's crust caused in when the earthquake attached to the station recorded a big earthquake last evening.

As near as the professional observers can estimate from their instruments, the convulsion occurred about 4,000 miles from Washington. This wide place of disturbance in the southern hemisphere, up to Alaska, or out in the Pacific or Pacific ocean.

There were about 900 all told aboard the Republic and the total of the Florida's crew and passengers is estimated to be nearly 1,000.

News of the transfer of passengers and crews to the Baltic was received by wireless at the Siscoon station at 11:30 last night. No details have arrived as to the time taken nor the perils of the task.

The Republic was so full of water that an attempt to tow her was abandoned by the Baltic. After her passengers and crew were taken aboard the Florida, Captain Inman Sealy refused to abandon his ship until she actually sank. He remained by her in a small boat.

After the collision and when the Republic's passengers and crew were taken aboard the Italian liner it was believed that she could proceed to New York at the rate of about eight miles an hour but when the sea began to rise and the fog still hung like a blinding cloud over the sea the attempt was abandoned.

The water steadily rose in the Florida's hold and as a measure of precaution all board except her crew, were put in small boats and rescued.

After the transhipment of passengers, a fleet of life boats hung to the lee of the Florida to take her crew off as soon as it was seen that she was sure to go down.

Wireless messages were sent forth in all directions awaiting for aid. The first dispatches, which brought immediate aid, prevented an appalling loss of life.

New York City.

Gentlemen:

In placing my order this a.m. for a Chalmers-Detroit "30" and also advising my friend to join me in purchasing another of the same model (which has been done today), I did so after due consideration and examination and trial, and feel satisfied that it is one of the best four cylinder cars of its size, and certainly the best for the money that has yet been on the market.

Yours very truly,

W. B. Herreshoff
President.

The Herreshoff Manufacturing Company.

Mr. John B. Herreshoff, who designed and signed the above letter, is world-famous as the designer of the yacht which have for so many years successfully defended the America cup. Trust Should Show Net Earnings for Year of About $95,000,000.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

New York, Jan. 22.—Steel shares and Erie were leaders in market improvement toward the end of the week. Wall Street did not wait for the Erie decision to be rendered, but on Friday decided it would be favorable to the company, the chief argument being that the Public Service Commission would hesitate to throw a railroad into receivership with general business in such a delicate condition. Proceeding on this basis, it was argued that a Public Service Commission that would let Erie issue bonds was not to be feared by the other corporations, and this circle of light shined upon all it affected every stock on the list. Erie was marked up, but reacted, taking others down with it.

Steel Business Increases. There is a belief that Congress will do nothing to hurt the steel industry. Having in mind the steel industry, manufacturing companies in the steel industry are not likely to be hurt by any action of Congress.

Taste Is Sure Stomach Guide
A barometer which never fails, though seldom believed, is the taste of the food. It is the direct guide to the stomach, and is the only one that is infallible. If the food is good, the taste is good, and the stomach is satisfied. If the food is bad, the taste is bad, and the stomach is dissatisfied. Therefore, to keep the stomach healthy, one must pay attention to the taste of the food.

ALL IRELAND IS USED TO STUDY OF GAELIC.

Marvelous Progress of Language Revival Feature of Recent History.

COLLEGES TAKE UP WORK

Movement Led by Douglas Hyde Now Considered "Fashionable."

Special Correspondence of the Boston Sunday American

Dublin, Jan. 23.—The revival of the study of the Gaelic language in Ireland is a movement which has taken on a new impetus in the past few years. It is now considered a fashionable thing to be able to speak the Gaelic language, and many of the leading universities and colleges are now offering courses in the language. The movement is led by Douglas Hyde, who is the first president of the Gaelic League. He is a man of great energy and vision, and he has done much to bring the Gaelic language back into the lives of the Irish people. He has founded the Gaelic League, which is a society for the promotion of the Gaelic language. He has also written many books and articles on the subject, and he has given many lectures. His efforts have been rewarded, and the Gaelic language is now being studied by thousands of people in Ireland and in other parts of the world.

"OUR HONORABLE FRIEND"

"When the American fleet was sailing recently by the plan of the Pacific Ocean Japan was overhauled with precision and good will toward the United States, and could find nothing but approval and admiration for the policy of the nation and the acts of its individual citizens." "When the American fleet had been divided and the larger part of it had reached the farthest possible point from the Pacific coast, Japan's irritability and political astuteness revealed, and here now reached an apparent stage that the earliest action of the California Legislature may be warranted into a cause which is a mathematical law, and that it increases in direct proportion to the distance of the AMERICAN FLEET FROM THE PACIFIC WATERS."—From William K. Hearst's telegram from San Francisco to the Japanese situation.

150 Churches Begin Great Campaign to Evangelize Metropolitan Boston

Chapman-Alexander Simultaneous Revival Meetings Open Tuesday—Wave of Religion Will Sweep the City.

A REVIVAL OF THE GOSPEL, one of the most important of the religious movements of the present time, is being inaugurated in Boston. The city is the scene of a great campaign to evangelize the metropolitan area. The campaign is being conducted by the Chapman-Alexander Simultaneous Revival Meetings, which are being held in 150 churches throughout the city. The meetings are being held on Tuesday, January 24, and will continue for several days. The campaign is being conducted by a large number of evangelists, who are working in the city and in the surrounding areas. The campaign is being conducted in a systematic plan, which is designed to reach every part of the city. The campaign is being conducted in a way that is designed to bring about a revival of the gospel in the city. The campaign is being conducted in a way that is designed to bring about a wave of religion that will sweep the city.

MY WIFE, Susan Mingley, having left my home and board I will not be responsible for any debt she may incur after this date. GEORGE A. MINGLEY, 4 Cushman Hill St., Box 17, Mass.

Don't Blame Fate for Your Failure

FVERY weak, morbid man blames his own failure upon Fate. What he is he thinks Fate has made him. What he has done he believes was the work not of himself, but of Fate.

It is a view of life that is shared by many. It is a comforting view of life for the failures. Having made a sorry mess of one's existence, it is pleasant to think that the blame is Fate's; that we are what Omar Khayyam calls

Impotent pieces in the game he plays Upon this checkerboard of nights and days, With ether and thither moves, and checks and slays, And one by one back in the closet lays.

The defect in this view of life is that it is all wrong.

We are not puppets; we are not the sport of Fate. Perhaps we are not the absolute masters of our destinies, but at least we can direct them. We can escape the evil that Fate has in store for those who waste their lives. We can reap many of the rewards that are set apart for useful lives. But when a man deliberately makes a wreck of his mind and body, casts his opportunities to the winds, and through his idleness and self-seeking finds himself drifting helplessly along on the ebb tide, he has no right to cry out that Fate did it, or that he is a poor victim of the "fell clutch of circumstance."

Fate is, after all, only a name—a name for something which has no existence. But it is human to find some person or object on which the blame can be cast for our own shortcomings.

You have often seen a boy who had broken a sled or wagon accuse his little brother of having been the real cause of the occurrence. And we do not need to turn to children for examples.

When a railroad accident happens because the directors were too greedy for dividends properly to safeguard the lives of their passengers, they select an engineer, a conductor or a switchman for a scapegoat.

He becomes the real victim. He gets the blame and the penitentiary sentence, if the accident happens to be bad enough.

Always the human mind tries to shift the blame, to escape the consequences to body and to conscience.

That was why Fate was invented, and given a name. And that is why, among all classes of men, it is held responsible for all the results of human carelessness, of human greed, of human idleness and of human sin.

The drunkard, slinking in his corner of the dirty, cheap saloon, watches a prosperous man pass the door. His heart is filled with envy.

"I might have been like that," he tells the bartender. "If Fate hadn't been against me. I might be wearing good clothes and holding my head up, instead of sweeping out this saloon for a few drinks a day."

A man standing beside the bar smiles pityingly at the poor drunkard.

"I suppose that's so," he says, "but I never blame Fate for what happens to me. I've got a good job, and a family, and a home, thanks to my not having the kind of habits you've got."

And then he takes a drink and another, and invites the poor drunkard to share one or two of them.

And the next night he comes back, and the next, and gradually he becomes a little shabbier and a little coarser, until comes the day when he loses that good job he had, and his family wonder where the next meal is coming from, and he, too, begins to blame Fate for it all, and think, perhaps, that the drunkard was right.

It is, of course, natural for man to credit himself for all the good that he gets out of the world and blame Fate for all the bad. It is natural, because we are born vain. The rich man will tell you that unflagging energy has made him what he is—energy and a superior brain.

The poor man will tell you that he has been held down, denied opportunity, cheated out of his right to the pursuit of happiness.

Both are partially right—partially wrong. Children may be born of rich parents, and, carefully watched, remain in easy circumstances. There is a little luck in that—good luck.

Other children may be born in poverty, surrounded by criminals, denied education. They turn criminals themselves. In that there is luck—bad luck.

But bear in mind that many children born rich die poor because they are too feeble or idle or worthless to take care of their inherited wealth. And many—in fact, most—of the people who succeed are born POOR, and struggle with poverty and environment until they overcome it. They, too, would be the puppets of Fate if they allowed themselves to be. But they learned, among the poverty and misery of their early days, that Fate was merely a word—an empty name—and that human beings with brains need not be puppets of that, nor of any other force in the world.

In the cartoon on this page the figure of Failure is seen pointing an accusing finger at the picture of Fate that he has conjured up in his imagination.

The cartoonist has done well to depict Failure as a weak, sullen man, whose posture shows his rage at the condition in which he finds himself.

Hunt among the saloons of any city or town, and you will find many such men. Usually you will find them smelling strongly of whiskey, which is the real cause of their failure.

But the man never blames the whiskey nor the weakness which made him its victim.

He forgets that it was his appetite that led him astray—his appetite and his weakness. He forgets that he had many an opportunity to brace up—both for his own sake and for the sake of those who were dependent on him.

All he remembers is that he is a failure—too far gone to hope for recovery—and that men about him are succeeding—living honest and decent lives, and making other people happy about them.

That thought fills him with jealous rage, and, loudly crying that he is not to blame, he glares at Fate, and shifts upon that fanciful being the responsibility which should be all his own.

With the man who is a failure in anything it is the same as he who fails in everything.

The man in the cartoon has made a total failure of his life. Such men are all too numerous in the world, but their number does not compare with that of the men whose lives are made up of little failures and who are free to blame all these little failures on Fate.

IF YOU ARE NOT USING ALL THERE IS IN YOURSELF—OF TALENT, INDUSTRY, BRAIN—YOU ARE A PARTIAL FAILURE.

You may have money and influence, and you may be succeeding fairly well in some undertaking.

If You Are a Puppet in Fate's Hands, It Is Because You Allow Yourself to Be One. Place the Blame Where It Belongs.

But do not be misled by small success. Do not stop with that, and if you have stopped there and are making no progress, do not blame Fate.

It is you who are at fault. You can succeed if you WILL succeed. Use all your faculties to the utmost and cultivate new faculties. Then you will be a real success. Stop finding a fantastic, imaginary being to shift the blame upon. Take it upon your own shoulders, hold yourself responsible, and you will have no time to bemoan that Fate is keeping you down.

OH, WINNIE!

Verse by Carolyn Wells

"An auction room," said Winnie Wynne, "I always love to haunt. This charming head by Penlaws I really, truly want. I fear I can't afford it—but, still, I rather guess. Though it's a hundred-dollar size, I'll capture it for less."

The Penlaws sketch was soon put up; the auctioneer exclaimed: "A real hand-painted pitcher! And mighty hand. Some framed! What am I bid for this here lot?" Winnie said softly, "Twenty!" "Twenty-five!" bawled a bald old man, "and surely that's a plenty!"

Winnie looked at the sketch again. It was a lovely head. "Would be effective in her den. 'Thirty!' she clearly said. 'Thirty, once!' called the auctioneer. 'Thirty, twice!' then he stopped. 'Thirty-five!' growled the bald old man before the hammer dropped.

"Thirty-five for this genuine! Any more, do I hear?" "Forty!" said Winnie, smiling at the red-faced auctioneer. He caught that smile! His hammer dropped—a grin came swift and wide. "Sold to Miss Wynne for forty dollars!" instantly he cried.

No!" shouted out the angry man, "you didn't deal fair then! The picture's worth far more than that! I meant to bid again! You let it go too quickly! I didn't have a chance!" He glared at winsome Winnie, who returned a haughty glance.

But as he glared she smiled at him! He stammered "Pardon, miss— The sale was quite correctly made! I'm glad you've purchased this! You have a splendid bargain—your money is well spent! Oh, please, let me assist you, miss, to get it packed and sent!"

GORGEOUS
CANONIZATION CEREMONIES TO THE
MAID OF ORLEANS
IN ROME
NEXT EASTER.

JOAN OF ARC, who rescued France from the English and was burnt at the stake as a witch, is at last to be canonized as a saint by the Roman Catholic Church.

The ceremony of canonization will be performed at Easter by His Holiness the Pope. It has been preceded by investigations and formalities of unsurpassed length, and the final ceremony will be of corresponding magnificence and dignity.

The solemn entry of the Pope, in his pontifical robes, surrounded by his court, into St. Peter's will mark the beginning of the canonization. He is received by the Cardinals and Bishops in mitres and full canonical robes. The Papal choir renders the "Ave Maria, Stella." The Pope is borne on his throne to the hall of canonization.

Then the promoters of the canonization humbly pray that the honor shall be granted to Joan of Arc. His Holiness pauses and invokes Heaven for guidance. Again the request is made, and the assembled prelates are asked to pray for enlightenment.

The "Veni Creator" is sung and the Litany of the Saints recited. At the third request the Holy Father accedes. The entire congregation rises, the pontifical or breecher alone remaining kneeling.

The Pope then, seated on his throne, with the Papal tiara on his head, promulgates a decree declaring Joan of Arc a saint and ordering that her memory shall be devoutly kept by the universal Church and that her name shall be inscribed in the catalogue of saints.

The Te Deum is then sung and the bells of St. Peter's ring out the news. Bells in high voices follow and mass is also celebrated in the other churches of Rome.

It is twenty years since the first

2 School at Los Angeles.

The purpose in the mind of the parent or teacher is to make the child conform to the mind of the adult. A normal desire to please is used to lead the child to the child. A just method to the mind of the parent may be unfair to the child. The child's normal desire for life must be reached on its own psychologic basis.

The babe must be reached on the babe's basis. The child must be reached on the child's basis. The youth must be reached on the youth's plan.

The methods that have been used to reach the child on the adult's basis are: force, obedience to authority, and obedience to command. These methods are in a religious duty to the opinion, ideal or demand of the parent or the teacher.

The command to obey with its penalties of punishment, force, or fear, or social, is the result of the "right-of-the-older-to-command-the-younger" principle.

These have been attempted to secure obedience by command and punishment. These have been attempted to bring or reeducate. Others have attempted to reach the child by the approach or secure to the child or youth.

The first two methods are so essentially wrong that it is no explanatory comment to say that they are wrong. They attempt to force the full grown ideals of the adult on the child. The third method is developed in the mind of the parent or teacher by years of training and experience. The child is being of millions of years—yes, even millions of decades. The soul of each is perfect, but its expression is limited. The inherited structure determines to a great extent the immediate possibilities of the child; the environmental conditions arouse similar inherited qualities to action. By changing the environment, one arouses other brain centres, allowing new elements of the mind to manifest.

The blind does not make the mind, but it does determine its expression. re a Saint."

Never has a historical character excited more controversy than Joan of Arc. Much has been made of the fact that French revolutionaries executed her, but they were under the control of the English king, and after her death another court rehabilitated her.

Her execution seems to cast shame on England, but it is urged that the English nation had no responsibility for her death. Executed were a few English nobles, a Norman descent and a mixed lot of Normans, Burgundians and Bretons.

Recently the Free Masons of Paris put a wreath on her statue, marked: "To Joan of Arc, whom the Church honors for the Catholic faith and the French people for the French Republic."

She died of the French, labeled: "To Joan of Arc, whom the Church had the courage to canonize."

The French Government has tried to make an exclusively lay heroine of Joan and has prevented the Church authorities from directing the annual public celebration in her honor in Orleans. All detachments of the French army passing Joan's birthplace at Domremy are required to present arms.

Mark Twain in America, Andrew Lang in England and Anatole France in France have recently written works celebrating her as one of the most remarkable heroines in all history.

trip toward canonisation was taken, a subject had been discussed for centuries. There was little doubt that John of Arc was a very heroic and noble character, but the question was whether he reached the height of virtue necessary for sainthood. Archbishop Ireland, of New York, gave a great impetus to the movement to canonize her by the eloquent and energetic of her which he delivered in 1891.

Those who proposed her for canonization were required to prove to the Vatican—That she never told a lie. 2—That she was absolutely unselfish and without complaint upon her personal character. 3—That she performed at least one miracle through faith in God.

In accordance with ancient custom, a functionary called the Devil's Advocate presented the reasons against her canonization, and argued them ingeniously. After the fullest possible examination, the cause of Joan's supporters triumphed.

Joan of Arc was born at Domremy, Lorraine, in 1412, and as a child saw and her a country made miserable by the English invasion. Voices in the air whispered to her as she tended her flocks that was chosen by God to save her country. She joined the army, and inspired the soldiers by her heroic conduct. Her first great achievement was to rescue Orleans, the last important city still in the hands of the French, and then closely besieged

Her victories enabled Charles VII. to be crowned King at Rheims, and finally drove the English into a northern corner of France. It was at this point that Joan of Arc was captured in a skirmish outside Compiègne. Not only did the French

The English held her prisoner, and she was brought before a court of French ecclesiastics for trial and convicted of heresy and heresy. She was then handed over to the civil power, the English commander, for execution. During her imprisonment she was subjected to torture and shameful treatment.

execution seems to cast shame on us, but it is urged that the English had no responsibility, for those who led her were a few English soldiers who were descended from a mixed lot of Burgundians and Flemings.

Only the Free Masons of Paris put a mark on her statue, marked "To Jean de Arc whom the Church burned." The Catholic view of her is thus labeled: "To Jean de Arc, whom the Church had the duty to condemn."

THE BRIDES TRUSSEAU

To Be in Perfect Taste Simplicity Should Be the Keynote.

HOW many girls in this hurried and commercial age have their trousseau wedding gown? No matter what time it is, some one old trousseau is unpacked from its careful wrapping with tender and reverent fingers, to try it on and wonder how much ever aged it is to a girl's taste.

We had such slender waists in those days. It is much more likely to be mother's mother who has sentimentally cherished such relics, and one fortunate girl in busy New York has a periodic celebration when her grandmother allows her to rummage, and some of the queer little things, with dresses, with large broken paid design, made with a waist about six inches deep, and the puffed sleeves, would not hold so much sense even now.

But the simple little wedding gown of dainty white muslin with its tiny bertha of real Valenciennes lace would not feel at all comfortable in the neighborhood of the present day wedding gown. It is much more sensible, to be sure, to have a dress that can do service later for dinner; so one who must give up the sentimental idea with a sigh.

To be in the most perfect taste simplicity should be the keynote no matter how beautiful the material may be. Presumably all brides are young and beautiful, at least there is no reason why she should not be beautiful for this one occasion at any rate, and if there is a wedding of any person, whatever, she would wear a veil for there is nothing which so softens the whole effect, giving an ethereal and mysterious suggestion which is wholly charming.

The young women of today are no more in their choice of fabrics than there is really no mystery in white satin. The old-fashioned girl with her chiffon and organza and other dainty materials could appear odd nowadays, so possibly the ideally simple wedding gown might win an affection. However, the girl without much money need not, even today, spend a very large amount upon her entire trousseau, and yet may be properly gowned for every occasion and be quite the mode.

One of the most useful little dresses which has been in vogue for a long time is the princess or empiere affair, either of heritages serge or broadcloth, which with a long train of the same material makes an admirable going-away gown, and with the addition of a little heading or other trimming and a shallow or deep guimp, which is most becoming, is elaborate enough for many occasions—lunching downtown, the matinee, morning musicals or even dining at dinner tables on the way. This gown is, of course, short, and is a source of much comfort and convenience. The choice of coloring is practically unlimited, so long as it is confined to the dark soft shades.

If a trip South is contemplated, another of the same general contour may be added of white serge, preferably made in severe tailor style, with a somewhat shorter coat which seems more in keeping with a skirt of walking length. Broadcloth will continue to be popular well into the spring, and deservedly so, since no other wool fabric has quite the soft, clinging quality and wonderful color, so that one's more ceremonious street costume would be well chosen of this material.

A very attractive broad-headed bride recently chose a soft woolen brown, which was almost golden in some lights, the gown being very simply designed with the straight skirt, which came well up under the arms, and the bodice seeming a continuation of the gown is not suitable. Or it may be wiser to make use of it as a ball gown with the guimp removed.

One of the sweetest wedding gowns imaginable is of white chiffon cloth with a broad band of satin or three wide bias folds of the chiffon around

The question of petticoats need not be seriously considered, since the only ones permissible are so scant as to be almost unnoticeable. In this connection it is amusing to hear that in preparation for a dance in one of the conservative suburbs of New York, the matrons issued a little printed request to the prospective participants that they would not appear in the extremely clinging Directorate skirts, but, if they felt they must do so, to kindly wear the requisite amount of under-shirts.

The choice of models for afternoon costumes is unlimited. The apron of fabric effect is very popular, and offers a relief from the plain skirt. Most lovely of all materials are the bordered effects, giving an indefinite variety of shades and designs, so that each and every one's coloring may be satisfactorily matched or contrasted. In one of the late models, the entire hem of the bodice is made of lace, which continues into the sleeve unbroken by the ugly seam over the shoulder, ver. The Eastern people know some process which is still a secret to us, for their silver continues bright forever.

There is no gown for evening wear which has the elaborate effect of the sequined robes, especially white and silver, or pink and silver, even a little silver going a long way toward richness. A warm evening wrap is an absolute necessity, and for general understudy service nothing is better than shades of tan. A white and gray squirrel lining is a very small, medium and large. It requires 2½ yards of 36-inch material.

No. 8403—A simple, comfortable dressing sacque, that is yet dainty enough to wear all through the morning hours, is always appreciated.

The one pictured is in old rose French flannel, but may be developed in other materials, such as outing flannel, cashmere, chamois and cotton crepe.

The garment is fitted to the figure in the back, while the front is rendered gracefully full by a cluster of tucks at the shoulder. The sleeves are gathered into prettily shaped turned-back cuffs, and a round collar completes the neck. Large pearl buttons are used for decoration.

For detach bust measure 3½ yards of 36-inch material will be required. The pattern is cut in three sizes: 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 44 inches bust measure.

To obtain either of these desirable patterns, fill out the accompanying coupon and mail with 10 cents in silver or stamps to
